

Important Information about Windows Vista and your Windows Mobile Handsets

Microsoft Windows Mobile Device Centre is the replacement for Microsoft ActiveSync on Windows Vista.

Note - If Windows Vista on your PC does not have Windows Mobile Device Centre, follow the steps below to install it.

1. Insert the Getting Started Disc into the disc drive on your PC. The installation wizard checks your PC and automatically launches the Windows Mobile Device Center installer.
2. Windows Mobile Device Center is available in English and several other languages. Select the desired language then click Next.
3. Click Setup and Installation.
4. Select the Windows Mobile Device Center check box and click Install.
5. When installation is complete, click Done.
6. On the Getting Started with Windows Mobile screen, click Close.

To set up synchronization between your phone and PC:

1. Connect your phone to your PC. Windows Mobile Device Center configures itself and then opens.
2. On the license agreement screen, click Accept.
3. On the Windows Mobile Device Home screen, click Set up your device.
Note - Choose Connect without setting up your device if you only want to transfer media files, check for updates, and explore your phone but not sync Outlook information.

Synchronizing information with your computer:

4. Select the information types that you want to synchronize then click Next.
5. Enter a device name for your phone and click Set Up.

When the wizard finishes Windows Mobile Device Center synchronizes your phone automatically.

Notice that Outlook e-mails and other information will appear on your phone after synchronization.
